

Supporting students interested in a career in Pharmacology

As an educator, you play a big role in supporting students, guiding them through their studies, and sparking their interest in potential careers.

The British Pharmacological Society is here to help you in supporting and inspiring the next generation of pharmacologists. We have a range of resources and tools available, including:

- Information to help you discuss different career options
- Guidance on designing a curriculum
- Resources to help you teach about the use of research animals
- Events to support professional development

To explore our tools and resources, visit
bps.ac.uk/careers

Educators' Networking Meeting

We host an annual Educators' Networking Meeting, bringing together bioscience educators to discuss key issues, connect with each other and share helpful resources and opportunities.

Education Grant

This is a grant that Society members can apply for. You could be awarded up to £2,500 to create a pharmacology teaching resource that aligns with our core curricula.

Innovations in Pharmacology Education workshops

Educators can apply to demonstrate at our Innovations in Pharmacology Education Workshops, held during our annual meeting. The workshops are a chance to discover innovative educational approaches, resources and tools, and are an excellent networking opportunity.

You can also visit bps.ac.uk/educational-resources to find useful educational resources related to pharmacology.