The British Pharmacological Society is a charity with a mission to promote and advance the whole spectrum of pharmacology. It is the primary UK learned society concerned with drugs and the way they work, and leads the way in the research and application of pharmacology around the world.

Founded in 1931, the Society champions pharmacology in all its forms, including laboratory, clinical, and toxicological aspects, across academia, industry, regulatory agencies and the health service. With over 3,500 members from over 60 countries worldwide, the Society is a friendly and collaborative community that looks forward to welcoming new members.

Membership benefits

Join the British Pharmacological Society to access a range of benefits for members throughout all stages of their career:

- Connect with other members at special networking events or online at www.bps.ac.uk
- Free access to the British Journal of Pharmacology and British Journal of Clinical Pharmacology including articles accessed through the iPhone/iPad app for each journal.
- Financial support to attend scientific meetings – the Society gives out £50,000 in travel awards to eligible applicants each year.
- Free or discounted attendance for our educational workshops and scientific meetings, including our flagship annual meeting Pharmacology.

Members can participate in and steer the Society's wide-ranging activities that support and strengthen pharmacology: from explaining the importance of pharmacology in the modern world through education, public engagement and outreach initiatives, to developing collaborations that reflect the increasingly multi-disciplinary nature of modern biomedical science.

Contact the British Pharmacological Society today to find out more about the benefits and services available to members and start your application.

The Society has reduced membership rates for students and those applying from developing countries, as well as complimentary membership for retired pharmacologists and existing members taking a career break. Please contact us to learn more!
